Winsted Health Center selects O,R&L Construction for Winsted Project

Winsted, CT – The Board of Trustees of the Winsted Health Center has selected O,R&L Construction Corp. of Branford, CT as the developer to work with the Winsted Health Center to redevelop the site with a new building to house the emergency department and other medical services.

The Winsted Health Center has put together a team to thoroughly investigate all possibilities for redevelopment of the site. Colliers International, a leader in global real estate services, is providing advisory services to the Winsted Health Center. The Charlotte Hungerford Hospital has provided emergency and medical services at the Winsted Health Center to area residents since 1998. O,R&L Construction has offered commercial construction services for over 20 years.

Based on input from the Charlotte Hungerford Hospital and the Winsted Health Center, O,R&L has prepared site plans and drawings for a new building on the Winsted Health Center campus. In the proposed plan, the new building would be built in the southeast corner of the site where the current loading dock is located. It would consist of an upper level main floor to house the emergency department and related services, such as laboratory services and radiology. The sleep center and cardiac/pulmonary rehabilitation would potentially be located in a lower level floor.

Jonathan Blum, Executive Director of the Winsted Health Center, said, “We believe that O,R&L Construction brings the experience and expertise necessary to plan and develop a first class medical building at our facility. We look forward to working with O,R&L, Colliers International and the Charlotte Hungerford Hospital to meet our common objective of providing access to quality healthcare which will benefit all the residents in the area.”

“O,R&L Construction Corporation and our design team, which includes MBH Architecture of West Hartford and TPA Design, are very excited about this project. We look forward to being a part of the development team in designing and building a state of the art facility for the communities served by the Winsted Health Center. There is nothing more gratifying than taking an older building complex and re-developing into a new facility that will serve the public for future generations,” said Todd Renz, President of O,R&L Construction.

O,R&L Construction is a full-service construction firm and a leader in working with Connecticut’s expanding healthcare industry. O,R&L has earned a solid reputation for personal service, high standards, professionalism and quick turnaround time on projects large and small. Their experience includes several medical buildings similar to the proposed new building, including the development of the only Emergency satellite facility granted a Certificate of Need in Connecticut within the last five years.

The Winsted Health Center provides access to health and wellness services, programs and education for local communities, as well as runs the Helping Hands homemaker and companion care service. Located at 115 Spencer Street in Winsted, the campus is also home to Hungerford Emergency and Medical Care, the Community Health and Wellness Center and the Susan B. Perry Senior Housing complex.
